How are you using InfoReady today?

We got InfoReady about a year and a half ago. Prior to that, we were doing a lot of things over email. We had an internal database that was on SharePoint that had all of our external funding opportunities for American Cancer Society, AACR, Leukemia and Lymphoma Society. Then our institution acquired Seattle Cancer Care Alliance, which was co-managed by Fred Hutch, the University of Washington and Seattle Children's Hospital.

Because of this merger, our internal systems weren't working as well as we would like. We decided to seek out new systems. One of those systems we identified and selected was InfoReady. We actually put it into implementation for all of our external funding opportunities. In addition, we use InfoReady for limited submissions, seed and pilot grants, commercialization grants and as well as for some industry-sponsored opportunities where they are running an RFP.

How does InfoReady help?

Before, all of us had our own different systems, like Redcap, SharePoint, emails, Google or Microsoft forms. There are about 10 different groups across the organization that are using InfoReady now. InfoReady has really allowed us to be more consistent about how we are doing things process-wise, but also in some of the questions that we're asking.

We are trying to sync up things so that researchers know where to go to look for funding opportunities because before it was just on various different pages. They never knew where to look. With InfoReady, everything is centralized. And so that's really good.

Then we just piloted it for our internal commercialization fund, the Evergreen fund with external reviewers. I'm very excited. It worked very well for that. I think it's going to save us a lot of time.
